craft factories, is being whipped in advance. In schools supported by cities and states and run by private institutions, men—thousands of them—taken from relief rolls—are being taught the art of running huge machine tools, of shaping and fitting metal and of assembling the big hydraulic mechanism which actuate the landing gears of bombing planes.

An aircraft manufacturer told me recently that on a visit to Europe he encountered a German aircraft factory workman with a tool kit which would have done credit to a practical research engineer. Every workman has one like this," the manufacturer quoted the German as saying, and the narrator added, "the typical nation geared to airplane production such as the world has never seen."

Problem Faces All U. S.
The same problem of high industrial output in the aircraft field is facing the United States. Some 70,000 men actually are engaged in the construction of aircraft, military and commercial. In all, about 100,000 persons are employed in the aircraft industry.

an output of some 60 per cent of the nation's heavy tonnage and military planes, commercial wharfs are supplying hundreds of men for the factories to act in supervisory capacities. Other schools are turning out "single job" men such as machine tool operators or sheet metal workers.

More Men in Training
Last year three commercial institutions graduated 2,000 men, ready for supervisory tasks. This year they are expected to turn out at least 4,000. So heavy has been the demand for factory personnel that the Curtis-Wright Technical Institute, headed by an army man of 10 years' service, Maj. C. C. Mowley, is doubling its facilities. He graduates students in his sheet metal course in three months, in the airplane manufacturing and maintenance course in eight months, and in the master aviation mechanics course in a year.

The chief engineer of one of the leading aircraft companies stated this week "I will hire every man who can sit at a drafting board that I can lay my hands on."

OHIO HUNTERS FAVOR STAGGERED SEASON

Plan Wins 1,411 to 1,104 in State Questionnaire.

By The Associated Press
COLUMBUS, O., July 18—By a vote of 1,411 to 1,104 Ohio hunters favor last year's staggered hunting season over rules adopted this year, the Ohio division of conservation and natural resources learned today from questionnaires sent to 2,631 sportsmen.

The staggered season, an experiment last fall, was abandoned last month by the conservation commission because of farmer-landowner opposition. The survey, which extended into every county of the state, also disclosed that hunters favor supervised hunting areas, importation of rabbits from other states when native stock is low, and licensing of fur producers. The 12-gauge shotgun was the favorite weapon of 1,540 hunters, compared to 383 votes for the 16-gauge and 327 for the 20-gauge. More than half of the hunters have dogs, the survey showed. Most popular breeds were eagles (360), bird dogs (251), and spaniels (149).

COMPARISON OF RATES

In summary form, here is a comparison of the present rates and those proposed by the Gas Company. The first column denotes the amount of gas through each meter each month. The second column shows the cost under the present rates and for the first three years of the new rate schedule. The third column shows the cost in the fourth year and the fourth column shows the cost in the fifth year.

Cubic Feet	Pres. R. 1st 3 Yrs. N. Sched.	4th Year	5th Year
500	$ 1.00	$ 1.00	$ 1.00
1,000	1.27 1/2	1.30	1.30
2,000	1.82 1/2	1.90	1.90
3,000	2.37 1/2	2.45	2.50
4,000	2.92 1/2	3.00	3.10
5,000	3.47 1/2	3.55	3.70
6,000	3.97 1/2	4.05	4.25
7,000	4.47 1/2	4.55	4.80
8,000	4.97 1/2	5.05	5.35
9,000	5.47 1/2	5.55	5.90
10,000	5.97 1/2	6.05	6.45
13,000	8.47 1/2	8.55	8.95
20,000	10.97 1/2	11.05	11.45
25,000	13.47 1/2	13.55	13.95
50,000	25.97 1/2	26.05	26.45

Under a long fight before the state utilities commission for continuation of the present rates, Mayor Snare declined to say. It has not been many months since the city finished a long and costly and unsuccessful rate fight with the Marion Water Co.

How Bills Would Run The new rate schedule proposed by the company and now in the hands of council's ordinance and franchise committee would have the following effect. For the first three years, the rates would be the same as they are now. 5,000 cubic feet of gas costing $3.47 1/2. During the fourth year 5,000 cubic feet would cost $3.55 and in the fifth year $3.70. Thus at the end of five years the consumer would be paying 22 1/2 cents more for 5,000 cubic feet than he does now.

Under the company's proposal, 10,000 cubic feet of gas would cost $5.97 1/2 during the first three years, the same as now. In the fourth year it would cost $6.05 and in the fifth year $6.45. Thus the cost for 10,000 cubic feet at the end of the five years would be 47 1/2 cents more than the present cost.

All the charges are on a monthly basis. The minimum monthly charge would be $1 during all the five years, as at present. Unchanged also would be the provision for a delayed payment charge of five per cent which would be added if the bill is not paid within 10 days after the bill is issued. The charge would be not less than 10 cents in any case.

OPPOSED TO METERS Editor of The Star: To whom it may concern (and from whom we hear about it everybody is). It seems that our trusted city council is so anxious to get us in the big city class that the residents' wishes are not to be considered.

Do we want a change in our parking system to accommodate less cars? After all we are not so large that we do not need the business that our neighboring villages offer. When these customers enter our city and find parking meters on every hand, I wonder if it won't be just as convenient to shop where they don't have the pay as you enter system? Council now suggests that we continue the old method of parking on Center street. What does that mean? Only this—the Main street merchants will be the goat. He will have less space for his customers. Is this fair to him? It may be best that we find a storage space for these meters, forth the bill, and remain "the city that invites its visitors."

Two Super-Service Filling Stations To Be Opened Friday

Two new super service stations of the Pure Oil Co., at Center and Jefferson streets and at David street and Woodrow avenue, will be formally opened to the public tomorrow.

Work of constructing and improving the structures and sites constituted a $15,000 project for the company, which has five other retail outlets in the city.

Elmer Smith of 587 Miami street and Robert Schneider of 385 West Church street will be co-managers of the East Center street station and Harry G. Evans of 762 Congress street will manage the David street station.

Both buildings are of the English cottage type architecture, common to all the company's stations. The David street unit is a completely new building. An unimproved station previously was in operation at the East Center street location.

Work of renovation and construction was done by local contractors under the direction of Fred Aldridge of Columbus, the company's supervisor of construction.

Both stations have complete facilities for usual service station operations and each features inside lubrication and washing accommodations.

Special merchandising sales will feature the formal openings. The Pure Oil Co. first began operations in Marion 14 years ago upon acquisition of the Dependable Oil Co., which had several stations here.

KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS ACIDS

Help 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes Flush Out Poisonous Waste

If you have an excess of acids in your blood, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may be overworked. These tiny filters and tubes are working day and night to help Nature rid your system of waste and poisonous acids. When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause backache, rheumatic pains, may cause swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headache and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passage with urinating and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Kidneys may send help the same as you would. So ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Joining the Issue

THE Democratic party had a momentous decision to make a year ago. Would it have the chance of cutting loose from the New Deal, or take the chance of sticking with it, which meant nominating Franklin D. Roosevelt for a third term?

The party has chosen the latter course. The campaign issue has been joined squarely and firmly. Wendell Willkie, who wanted to argue the New Deal with the man who is the New Deal, is going to have his opportunity.

Likewise, voters who have wanted a chance to express themselves on the third term question are going to have their chance. In politics, as in war, the strategic problem is how to join the conflict in such a way that a definitive conclusion will be assured. No loose ends will be left dangling when election day is over next November. It will be Roosevelt forever or never.

There are many overtures of meaning in the Democratic convention which will not be missed by those listening for them. Some of them come from the party's platform. The party's dependence on Mr. Roosevelt to win votes does not entail acceptance of his views on foreign policy, for instance.

The same divergence appears in attitudes on party organization, such as reluctance to substitute New Dealers for Democrats in the party's leadership. No matter how hard Democrats try to prevent the appearance of one big, happy family, the circumstances of disruption are plain. All New Dealers are Democrats, in a generic sense, but all Democrats aren't New Dealers.

In 1932 the Democratic party enjoyed the experience of being revitalized by Mr. Roosevelt's dynamic campaigning. In consequence it took control of the government in 1933. Many Democrats didn't enjoy what followed, but all was forgiven when Mr. Roosevelt carried 48 states in 1936. Again, some of them didn't enjoy what followed but all will be forgiven if Mr. Roosevelt can turn the trick again in 1940.

Speaking of Degeneration

SELF-CRITICISM may be healthy, but it's time to come to an understanding about degeneration of democratic government. True, it has been caught short by Germany's military machine, but since when did a military machine come to be proof of a vitalized system?

Americans recently finished celebrating the 164th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. Some of them may have re-read that momentous document to refresh their memory. "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundations on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness."

When those words were written, despotic government had been degenerate for centuries. Out of despotism's failures popular government was born. It flourished because it worked better than despotism. It was called the hope of the world, and it still is the hope of the world. It hasn't been perfect and it did make the grave error of letting despotism create a military juggernaut in Germany, but it is not degenerate. Despotism is degenerate.

A Perfect Understanding

ALL signs are that the United States and Germany have a perfect understanding in diplomacy. Nothing could be more important at this juncture.

The United States will not trust the German government any further than Shirley Temple in her prime could have thrown Hermann Goering in his prime. That's the whole point.

When it is recalled that other governments in dealing with Germany have continued to trust it long after all reason for confidence had been destroyed, the importance of candor is plain. It is the way diplomacy should be conducted always, but rarely is. The United States is practicing no hypocrisy; it is saying what it means.

Germany, on the other hand, knows that the United States is aroused. While refraining from provocative language, the Nazi note writers make their messages short and sweet. Thus, they say they don't intend to invade North America or South America, but American republics had better mind their own business—to which State Secretary Hull replies in effect, "All right, we'll mind ours if you mind yours."

That's the way things should be in relations between nations. It takes away the suspense and puts the cards on the table.

News Behind the News

New Deal Program Believed Greatly Revised To Fit Needs of Campaign.

By PAUL MALLON

CHICAGO, July 12.—When Wendell Willkie, Republican challenger, was in the White House, he was not only a man of letters, but a man of letters. He was not only a man of letters, but a man of letters. He was not only a man of letters, but a man of letters.

Paul Mallon

Such an admission of the opposition is a significant step. It is a significant step. It is a significant step. It is a significant step. It is a significant step.

Silent About Cartels

In Washington, Agriculture Secretary Wallace's silence has been striking. He has been striking. He has been striking. He has been striking. He has been striking.

With this shift in the political atmosphere, the question of international emigration is a natural result of the fall of France and the books of the Democrats being "the war party." It may be developed further and further by actions which Mr. Roosevelt will take as President before November.

Other Changes

In Washington, John Lewis and the CIO boys do not come around the administration halls much any more. In Chicago, Mr. Willkie's campaign headquarters were not only a place of business, but a place of business. He was not only a man of letters, but a man of letters.

In Washington, the White House has been advertising peace-time consumption to raise the morale of the nation. It is a significant step. It is a significant step. It is a significant step.

Policies Reorganized

These incidents make it evident the administration is reorganizing policies fully for the campaign. The new line is clear. The new line is clear. The new line is clear.

Indeed there are very good inside reasons for believing Mr. Roosevelt has for some days been contemplating some step as ordering the British fleet away from the Atlantic coast.

Unification

The shift of international emphasis is a natural result of the fall of France and the books of the Democrats being "the war party." It may be developed further and further by actions which Mr. Roosevelt will take as President before November.

Today and Tomorrow

Attitude of Country at Large Toward Third Term Nomination Uncertain.

By WALTER LIPPMANN

CHICAGO, July 12.—These lines are written before seeing the platform, which knowing for certain Mr. Roosevelt will accept, the nomination, or how he will accept it, if he does accept it, and without knowing the name of the vice presidential candidate.

I feel as if I were writing the review of a play which I have not yet seen, and that if I do not look out I shall be trying to assemble words which will seem equally appropriate no matter whether the play is the tragedy of "Hamlet" or the "Comedy of Errors."

My only consolation is that there are others here in Chicago who are in a worse predicament, namely the authors of the platform and the writers of keynote speeches. They, poor wretches, have to pretend to say important things which will not look preposterous when and if they are remembered and recited back at them in August, in September, in October.

But even if I were to assume the obvious is going to happen, that of course, the platform will, of course, mean everything in general and nothing in particular. I nevertheless wish I did not have to write this article.

For here in Chicago all that one sees is a little of the machinery by which a great spectacle is being staged. The spectacle itself cannot be seen here in Chicago.

That is to say it is impossible as yet to know whether the people will think that Mr. Roosevelt's friends have arranged his nomination by outmaneuvering the opposition, or that the people will think that the arrangements, the devices, the maneuvers are merely the means by which the inevitable has been brought to pass.

It will be easier to form a sound opinion on this crucial question when we have all gone home. Until then we shall do well not to jump to easy conclusions.

The Democrats have already put on a striking exhibition of how partisanship can blind men to the realities. They have decided, it appears, to treat the Willkie candidacy as something manufactured by the utility companies and to pretend that there is no popular movement behind Willkie. They do not really believe this. But they have launched their campaign on the pretense that they do believe it. They will soon discover how wrong they are, and that a campaign against Willkie pitched at the demagogic level of Senator Barkley's speech will prove to be a boomerang. For it will provoke the resentment of great masses of honest and patriotic citizens. These citizens know that they are not the tools of "futility" and they will not listen patiently when they are told that they are.

Possible Mistake

The Republicans are, it appears, set to make a similar mistake about another Roosevelt nomination. They are tempted to pretend that the third term tradition has been broken without serious opposition from within the Democratic party by the intrigue of a small group of designing men.

Almost certainly that will not be true. There has been intrigue and there are designing men around Mr. Roosevelt as there are around all other public men. But it will be safer to assume that their designs have failed, that the intrigue would have miscarried, were it not for the indubitable fact that Mr. Roosevelt has the largest popular following of any man of his party, that in fact no other Democrat has any real popular following.

Though I think myself that Mr. Roosevelt would have been wise to refuse the nomination, and that his renunciation would have served the highest interests of the nation, that opinion does not alter the fact that he is the first choice, with no second choice, of millions of voters. And that at the bottom of everything is the real reason why the convention will nominate him for a third term.

Any other nomination but Willkie at Philadelphia, any other nomination but Roosevelt at Chicago, would have made this election a contest of party machines. These two nominations will make it a contest of popular movements led by the two most gifted natural popular leaders in public life today.

THE FAVORITE "PLANK"

From News of Other Years

TEN YEARS AGO

It was Friday, July 12, 1926. Chief of Police J. W. Thompson announced that every lead run down in an effort to trace the slaying of Raymond, Steele, Marion, finding station operator had ended in failure and that it seemed likely the crime would have to go down on the records as another of Marion county's unsolved mysteries.

Zara Agha, Turkish citizen who claimed to be 156 years old, arrived in the United States for the purpose, he said, of letting American scientists have a look at him and also to buy himself a set of American clothes.

Mrs. Carl Wagner entertained the Cicerella club at her home on Carhart street.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

It was Sunday, July 18, 1920. Sons were born to Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln Kimble of Chestnut street and Mr. and Mrs. Emmet Smith of Farming street. J. Adam Bede, former congressman from Minnesota and widely known as a lecturer, was a guest of Judge and Mrs. Grant E. Mouser at their home on East E. Mouser street. In the afternoon Judge Mouser and his guests delivered addresses at the Knights of Pythias memorial services in Waldo.

Dr. T. H. McAfee, pastor of Trinity Baptist church, was stricken by paralysis just as he reached his home on South State street after returning from the union services at Calvary Evangelical church where he had delivered the sermon. The cause was attributed to overwork. He had never fully recovered his strength from an illness of a year ago.

For the second time within a week Senator Harding, as the Republican presidential nominee, made an attack on the League of Nations covenant, registering his own and the Republican party's hostility to that document. His first statement had been on acceptance of the league as the dominant issue of the campaign to be settled in a "solemn referendum" submitted to the people as desired by President Wilson and proclaimed in a declaration by Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic candidate for the vice presidency.

Mr. Harding's second statement, issued Sunday night, was in the form of a series of interrogatories based on the league and propounded to Governor James M. Cox, the Democratic presidential nominee, on the assumption that he and President Wilson were in complete accord in their views on the league.

Senator and Mrs. Harding attended services at Trinity Baptist church in the morning and passed the remainder of the day quietly at their home on Myrtle avenue. The Trinity church bulletin for the day contained this paragraph: "Trinity church is glad to welcome the return of Senator and Mrs. W. G. Harding, who have not been with us for some time. Senator Harding comes back with high honors as nominee of a great political party for the highest office that is within the gift of the people of the United States to bestow. Trinity church feels highly honored that one of its members should be so recognized, but the senator's welcome is the more sincere, not because of his laurels but because he is Warren G. Harding."

Among the visitors greeted by Mr. Harding were J. Adam Bede, former congressman from Minnesota, and Congressman C. Bascom Sloop of Virginia, member of the Republican national committee. Mr. Harding had completed the final draft of his speech of acceptance late Saturday afternoon.

The Monroe Doctrine

A Curtain Raiser for the Pan-American Conference.

By MORGAN M. BEATTY, Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Behind the Monroe Doctrine headlines you've been reading is a delicate battle of wits between Washington and Berlin. At Washington the officials are

The primary aim of the doctrine is to bring the policy to the attention of the American public—both above and below the R.R. Grande—the original Monroe Doctrine and its championship of independence for the nations of the Western Hemisphere as well as its warning against European powers to keep off.

In effect it is a curtain raiser for the meeting for the meeting in Havana, July 21, of the 21 American republics. It might even portend a similar Monroe Doctrine for the hemisphere to supplement the purely United States doctrine pronounced by Monroe in 1823.

American state department officials have been itching for some time to get the Monroe doctrine on Page One to speak, in the same breath with the strange talk of Monroe Doctrines in Europe and Asia, and to show them in contrast with each other.

These officials have been ready to leap at a chance to prove Uncle Sam is on the level and devoid of all desire to set up any puppet regimes in this hemisphere.

Almost, But Not Quite. The conquest of Holland almost gave them the opening they were waiting for, but not quite. For the sovereignty of Holland is and Saturday night advance copies were forwarded by special messenger to offices of the press associations in New York City and Chicago. H. B. Hane took the address to New York City and R. T. Lewis made the trip to Chicago. The speech contained approximately 6,000 words and occupied about eight columns of newspaper space.

"I voted for HER just through courtesy and SHE beats me by one vote!"

her possessions in this hemisphere.

The conquest of France was a different story, a perfect example for official use at any rate. France retains her independence, even though a conquered power, and therefore has the right to keep her possessions as she sees fit.

So the state department got busy around noon and went to France, England, Germany and Italy. Those nations were flatly advised that the United States would not recognize any transfers of power in this hemisphere, nor acquire in them. The Monroe Doctrine was not mentioned.

It was implied, however, that the incident at Marquette where French and British warships are playing hide and seek is just as much in focus as say French Guiana.

That note was delivered in Berlin on June 18. On July 1 Berlin struck at the bait. It was Berlin that brought up the Monroe Doctrine.

Joachim von Ribbentrop, the German foreign minister, said the Monroe Doctrine interpretation "implicit" in the American note would amount to confirming on some European states the right to press territorial claims on this side of the Atlantic, but not others.

Hull's Statement. That was what the State department was waiting for. Secretary Hull did not even reply to the German note. Instead, through his regular press conference he addressed himself to the American public in the United States and Latin America. Others could listen, of course. Said Secretary Hull:

The Monroe Doctrine is solely a policy of self-defense which is intended to preserve the independence and integrity of the Americas. It was, and is, designed to prevent aggression in this hemisphere on the part of any non-American power.

Minneapolis

We've Half a Notion To Take a
Out There Just To See About Those Peculiar Streets.

By DAMON RUNYON

FOR years and years whenever we met a fellow from Minneapolis, we would say, "How do you like the streets?"

"Tell me, sir, why did the founders of this city fix the streets to run in such a funny zig-zag fashion?"

"What do you mean zigzag? Our streets are straight as ever an Indian went to war." "But," we would say, "don't they make sudden little twists and turns? Don't they run up the sides of the buildings in spots?"

"See here, brother," the Minneapolisian would say, usually becoming slightly vexed, "our streets are so straight that compared to them the narrow path is a meandering cow trail. Our streets are straighter than the road to paradise."

Sometimes he would add: "So are our citizens." We persisted in our inquiry, Damon Runyon feeling that one day we must surely find someone from Minneapolis who would convey an impression we have retained since boyhood: the outcroppings of that throwing machine are not on the bias. That they spin a guile.

But so vehement were the denials we felt came to the conclusion perhaps it was Minneapolis at all we were thinking of. Some other city, surely, or that we meant the crooked streets of our fancy in some old dream. Yet we remember distinctly it was Minneapolis that day we passed as a kid soldier with the noble 13th Minnesota regiment, just back from the Philippines, seeing the plaudits of the populace.

We had enlisted with those guys out in Francisco and had never been in the town before. We were Minneapolis before, or in any other part of Minnesota. A newspaperman, Mr. Mannix, whose first name was now recalled as learned, had asked him, "Colorado, is that brother, Frank, was running a paper at C. C. Creek. Joe felt it only a fraternal gesture. Frank to take charge of a young Colorado's strange land."

He introduced us to something called a flip, as nice a drink as anybody ever slipped lip over, and it was with eight or nine of them under the old cartridge belt that we parted. We remember with pride that the whole regiment was plumb out of step but us. We certainly positive that the streets of town dipped and dived like a Coney Island roller coaster.

Could it have been St. Paul we were in? Stillwater? Yet our gallant commander, Mr. Wade, assured us it was Minneapolis, this distant day, so clear is our memory of occasion we even have a distinct recollection of a child crying as we proudly paraded: "Mamma, why does that soldier keep tripping on his head?"

WE HAVE not been back to the town since. We told us Minneapolis since, but we of a mind to go this month, ostensibly to what is described as the Minneapolis aqueduct, but actually to examine those streets. A aqueduct runs from July 20th to 28th, we ought to give us ample time to get a grip on the matter in our own mind once a for all. Surely we cannot be wrong about street that runs like the figure 8.

This aqueduct is going to be big stuff, with an air show that lasts three days, a review every evening, a championship tennis featuring Gene Autry, championship tennis matches, archery meets, skeet shoots, golf events, diamondball, fireworks, and even religious services. We judge, however, that the jumbo attraction will be a water carnival on the 500-mile Paul Bunyan canoe race, the 100-mile motor races, a huge swimming meet and all manner of outdoor and indoor Olympic-distance swimming races for both men and women. There will also be a night show at Cedar Lake called the Aqua Folies.

IN FACT, the program is so extensive and diverse we force danger in our attention. Suppose it really was Minneapolis we were that time and suppose they are still going up those sherry flips out that way? Can you imagine the looks we would get from folks that city in years to come when we asked: "Is it not true you have bucking canoes, horses in swimming suits, outboard motors, your golf players, airplane wings on your wing cowboys, and that your archers shoot rockets?"

The Burma Road

By The Associated Press

The Burma road, which Great Britain agreed to close to halt a flow of war supplies to the Chinese central government, is a highway which might have been conceived by a Hollywood director and executed by the Pharaohs of ancient Egypt.

It follows the ancient "silk trail" traversed by Marco Polo in the 13th century. It is a part of the 2,000-mile-long trade route from Burma's seaport of Rangoon to the Yant river, connecting the Burmese railroad at Yant with Kunming (formerly called Yunnanfu), capital of Yunnan province.

Work on the most difficult stretch of the new road, between the Burma border and Kunming, wasn't started until the fall of 1935. Military exigencies caused the British to interrupt a freight route to British Asia to products to rugged blockade off the Japanese occupation of Pacific ports.

The Hailuowu setting is provided by sparse settled regions of snow-capped mountains, rice-bordered plateau lakes, tropical jungles of bamboo and teakwood and forests of towering evergreens where bands of gibbons scream in the shadows and strange birds chatter and sing.

The suggestion of ancient Egyptian methods of construction is inescapable. Most of the construction was done by hand by thousands of men and children with only a few crude tools. Sometimes for a steam-roller they used a pair of boulders pulled by water buffalo. On stretches the road was built on a rough platform of brush carried on crossings, high mountain ranges as well as the great gorges of the turbulent salween, the Mekong and numerous other streams.

There were untold difficulties, but the work went on until heavy trucks were soon carrying the trail with the heavily laden oxen and their antique carts.

Man Jailed After Five-Knockdown Fight at Waldo

Delaware Resident Faces Charges After Trading Blows with Marshal.

Oscar Arms, who engaged in a five-knockdown bout with Marshal Ernest Stoner of Waldo the other night when the officer tried to induce him to go home to Delaware, was in the Marion county jail today awaiting arraignment in municipal court.

The marshal, who scored three knockdowns to two for his opponent, has charged Arms with drunkenness, intoxication and resisting an officer.

Disturbance Follows Show
According to the story told by Marshal Stoner, Arms, a young bridegroom of about six weeks, came to Waldo Tuesday night with Mrs. Arms to take in the weekly free moving picture show presented in the community park by the merchants. During the evening the marshal said Arms did some drinking and when the show was over he did not wish to go home. Mrs. Arms did.

The marshal said Arms began to create a disturbance and that he (the marshal) then tried to get him to go back to Delaware. Marshal Stoner said he took hold of Arms' arm and Arms then knocked him down. The marshal rose to his feet and Arms knocked him down again, he said.

Marshal Stoner related that Arms came at him a third time, head lowered, but the marshal by this time had drawn his blackjack and floored Arms with the instrument. Arms had to be knocked down three times in all before he ceased to resist. The last knockdown being a knockout, the marshal reported.

Arms was carried to the Waldo jail and held for a while and then removed to the county jail later that night by the marshal.

SAFEGUARD

President Nominated on First Ballot

shoulders, waving banners. Horns and bells added to the bedlam. The organ and bands from high up in the second balcony added to the uproar. After 23 minutes, Barkley ordered the call of states to continue.

Arkansas yielded to Virginia and the 82-year-old Sen. Carter Glass proposed the nomination of James A. Farley. His voice was husky, and he apparently spoke with considerable effort.

Through consideration for the party itself, for its members and perpetuity I have come from a sick bed to present to this convention the name of a great Democrat, James A. Farley.

Glass called Farley a man who believes in the unwritten law and the traditions of the Democratic party that have prevailed since the day of Thomas Jefferson who less than three years before his death appealed to the party he established never to nominate a man for a third term.

There were boos from the audience but a moment later there were cheers when Glass added:

Since I have been sitting on this platform I have had two anonymous communications objecting to Jim Farley because he is a Catholic. It made me more determined to nominate Farley.

The Massachusetts standard was pulled out of its socket, and another parade started. The organ boomed out. When Irish Eyes Are Smiling, several other states joined in. But the demonstration was short-lived.

Down the roll call the clerk went. Gov. Culbert Olson of California, Sen. Francis Mahoney of Connecticut, Sen. Claude Pepper of Florida and Gov. Herbert Lehman of New York seconded the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt.

Sawyer Voices Support

No more seconding speeches for the President were permissible under the rules, but the chairman of many state delegations including Charles Sawyer of Ohio announced support for Mr. Roosevelt.

Marland presented the name of Sen. Millard E. Tydings. But the crowd was getting impatient and Edward J. Colgan Jr. of Baltimore was interrupted by shouts of name him—name him.

Massachusetts produced Patrick J. Doyle to second Farley's nomination but a challenge came as soon as he said down William H. Barker said that he and three other Massachusetts delegates had been sent to vote for Mr. Roosevelt.

A great cheer went up when Montana seconded the Roosevelt nomination. Sen. Burton K. Wheeler had himself been a candidate and decided only yesterday to keep his name out of nomination.

Vice President Garner's name was the last to be put up. Wright McCoy, a Houston lawyer and an old friend, proposed his nomination in a speech that was interrupted frequently by yells.

But Morrow clinched the edge of the leading stand and held his ground. Texans piled out of their section and paraded with a cowboy band when he finished. Rep. Sam Rayburn, the house majority leader, was among the paraders.

New York Swings It

The brief demonstration finished the rest of the roll call was hurried through and the voting started. The Roosevelt nomination went over midway of the roll call the big block from New York being enough to put his total above the necessary 551 majority.

Farley already was edging to the front of the platform before the result was announced. Barker presented him to the delegates, most of whom knew him personally. They yelled and cheered with hoarse throats.

I am grateful to the delegates of this convention who voted for me and to those delegates who would have voted for me if they had not been otherwise pledged," Farley said smiling.

I want this great convention to know that I will give that same support to the nominees of this convention.

Representative Rayburn was next with the word that he had been authorized by Vice President Garner to change Texas votes to Mr. Roosevelt. Close behind came Tydings and finally Governor Cooper of Tennessee with word the Secretary Hull had authorized him to say he never had been a candidate. Hull had received 523 votes although his name had not been put in nomination.

That removed all the candidates. Barker put the motion that the nomination be acclaimed unanimously. With a rafter shaking roar it went through.

The delegates turned wearily homeward. They had made history. No previous convention had given any man a full third term nomination.

PAN-AMERICAN

There were proposals for Pan-American mandates or protectorates over regions whose sovereignty in the words of the agenda is relinquished lapses or is materially impaired.

Some plan for preventing direct or indirect use of these regions by the axis powers as military or economic bases was reported to be looked upon favorably by some, if not all of the American republics.

Concerted Action Promised

Nazi political activities already troubling some of the Latin-American governments promised to bring concerted action at Havana possibly similar to the stricter immigration and alien-control police measures already adopted in the United States.

The ten billion dollar rearmament program of the United States was the big talking point of this country's delegation in efforts to enlist cooperation of other American nations in the common cause of an impregnable hemisphere defense.

American dollars also were behind United States efforts to win full support of the other republics for measures to protect new world economy against the spreading autarchic methods in Europe.

CONVENTION SCENE WHEN ROOSEVELT WAS NOMINATED

Placing of President Roosevelt's name in nomination for a third term was the signal for a wild demonstration at the Democratic national convention in Chicago. This is a view of the convention floor as the delegates bearing their state banners and signs declaring 'We Want Roosevelt' paraded haphazardly. Senator L. C. Hitt of Alabama is shown in the foreground making the nominating speech. (International News Photo)

Senator Minton (D Ind.) said the last word received by supporters of Paul V. McNutt, federal security administrator, was that it would be a wide open race.

Among those reported to be acceptable to Mr. Roosevelt were Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Louis Johnson, assistant secretary of war.

Sen. A. B. Chandler of Kentucky has been active on behalf of his colleague, Sen. Alben W. Barkley, and friends of Speaker William B. Bankhead of Alabama were seeking support for the latter.

Besides these there were numerous favorite son candidates, whose prospects hung largely on convention floor developments.

plete descriptions: No. 1 man, she said, was about 45 short and rather stout and wearing a light shirt, green trousers and a straw hat. No. 2 was about 35 of medium height, dark complexion and apparently a foreigner while No. 3 was about 30 very tall wearing a green shirt and straw hat.

From the description furnished by Miss Philtrout and persons in the neighborhood who reported seeing the car, police learned that it was a large model sedan of coach and thought to be a Dodge.

No one was found, however, who recalled the number of the license plate which the machine bore.

Captain E. C. Mackan and Patrolman Harry Smith of the city police department were joined in the early phase of the investigation by Corporal W. D. Mariner and Patrolman W. C. Corder of the state highway patrol substation. After a brief visit to the scene they ordered a state police radio message which carried a description of the trio and the bandit car.

City Police Have Some One's Goat, Don't Know Whose

Marion police today have someone's goat.

But to whom it belongs and from whence it came is a deep mystery.

Officers in the day force found the animal tethered at the rear of the city prison when they came to work at 6 a. m. today.

Reports of police activity last night, however, failed to answer the report of a usual question of 'How? When? Where? Why?' In fact the reports failed to carry a single mention of the goat.

Members of the day crew submitted that the goat was found somewhere sometime during the night, and was brought to the station to await a call from the owner.

Meanwhile Mrs. Goat, aaked out at a fence post in the rear of the building interspersed her placid nibbling at stray weeds with an occasional bleating sound peculiar to her species, apparently unimpressed by the fact that she is in the hands of the law.

DEMOCRATIC SENATOR WILL SUPPORT WILLKIE

Burke of Nebraska Holds Democratic Party

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Sen. Edward R. Burke, Democratic of Nebraska, announced here today that he would support Wendell L. Willkie, Republican for the presidency.

The Nebraska Democratic senator, defeated for re-nomination recently, made public a letter to the Republican presidential nominee which was dated July 17.

As one who feels deeply that in the light of present world conditions it is essential for our country to maintain the two-term limitation on the tenure of office of President I shall work for your victory at the polls in November.

Senator Burke, frequent critic of the present administration and outspoken opponent of the third term, was defeated in the Nebraska Democratic primary in his re-nomination effort by Gov. R. L. Coe.

The senator wrote Willkie that he was certain that a host of Democrats would support the Republican nominee.

VOTES AGAINST FATHER

Elliot Roosevelt Given First Ballot to Garner

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, July 18.—Elliot Roosevelt, as a member of the Texas delegation in the Democratic national convention, voted against re-nomination of his father, President Roosevelt, in the first announcement of that state's vote.

Like all other Texas delegates, Elliot voted for Vice President Garner. However, when Garner's name was withdrawn, young Roosevelt, like the other Texans, voted to make the choice of his father unanimous.

KNIGHTS WILL ELECT GRAND MASTER TODAY

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, July 18.—Harry C. Pollard of Lowell, Mass., was expected to be elevated to the office of grand master succeeding Mark Morris of Grand Rapids, Mich., as Knight Templar of the United States, voted on new officers in their 41st triennial convention today.

The Lansing, Mich., commandery captured first place in drill team competition last night.

Knights Templar announced their $4,500,000 educational foundation fund has been made available to college graduate students. Until now only undergraduate students were eligible for aid from the fund.

Adrian Humeray foundation secretary said 12,320 collegeans received assistance from the fund since 1922 and that 20,170 of these were graduated.

TROUBLED DUTCH SHIP IS CHEERED ON WAY

By The Associated Press

SANDUSKY, O. July 18.—Sped on its way by a blast of factory and boat whistles, the Dutch freighter Prins Willem II sailed toward Montreal today after a six-week tie-up in Sandusky harbor because of a sailors wage dispute and their fear of internment on British soil.

Manned partly by Canadian seamen who came here to replace 12 Dutch sailors now held in Detroit for deportation hearing, the trim 2,500-ton vessel, captained by Christian A. Van Der Eyck, steamed out of the harbor at dusk yesterday. It carried a 1,500-ton coal cargo.

Industrial Defense School in Full Swing; May Be Expanded

A program of instruction for factory workers, being carried on here as a part of the new national defense program, may be placed on a complete day-and-night basis within the next few days with the addition of one more class to the three now organized, L. H. Rieker, director of the program, announced today.

At present 60 men are enrolled in three classes and several others have been turned away because the groups already are as large as facilities of the Harding High school vocational shop permit. Of 18 or 20 men are interested in the training, the fourth class will be organized immediately, Mr. Rieker said.

The hours for the new class would be from 2 a. m. to 6 a. m., which Mr. Rieker believes will appeal to many men now working on late shifts in factories because they can go to "school" directly from work. However, a few applications will be taken for the other classes, one from 8 a. m. to noon, one from 1 to 5 p. m. and the other from 6 to 10 p. m. since several of the men now enrolled in these groups are planning to transfer to the early morning class if one is organized.

Instruction Free
No charge is made for the instruction, the classes being financed by the federal government to train skilled workers for industries essential to the nation's defense program. Although the classes are by no means limited to unemployed men, registrations are being handled through the Civil Employment Service offices at East Center and State streets.

The 60 men now enrolled range in age from 18 to 50 years and there is a comparable range in their shop training and experience. Mr. Rieker reported about two-thirds of the group are now employed in shops in Marion and nearby communities.

Since the whole purpose of the instruction program is to provide immediate yet thorough training for factory men, they are being given practical training and experience on all types of machines—lathes, cutters and milling machines—so they will be better equipped to handle a variety of jobs at the tempo of the country's defense program as stepped up, Mr. Rieker explained.

All-Around Training
Virtually all the men have been taught how to operate one of two types of machines, but are handicapped because they have not had adequate training in all types of machine shop equipment, Mr. Rieker pointed out.

"We try to teach each man enough about the different machines so that if the need presents itself he can tackle almost any machine in a shop with confidence," he said. "All our instruction is practical and is based on the theory that the best way of learning to do something is by doing it."

Although the primary purpose of the nationwide instruction program is to bolster the country's defense program, the benefits to the "students" are by no means limited to those who eventually may be working in factories turning out defense supplies. In reality, the classes give the many who did not get high school or college training a chance to develop skill through a short, streamlined course.

In the long run, however, all the men receiving this emergency training will be a boon to the national defense program since even those who won't be working on armaments will be better prepared to tend machines in plants turning out essential, non-military goods. As a result, the government's industrial experts who have set up the program believe the high-speed defense program can be carried out with less strain on industry in general.

Helpful To Industry
Mr. Rieker believes the instruction program, exceptionally beneficial to Marion since recent surveys have shown a marked shortage of skilled labor here.

In this connection, Mr. Rieker said he believes the fact so many men have enrolled in the classes since they were first announced 10 days ago is an indication that there is a large number of workers of all ages in the city anxious to improve their vocational ability and need only be given an opportunity to get the necessary training.

The program here was one of the first to be set up in the state, classes getting under way within a few days after Marion was asked to join in the training work. In spite of the fact there was little time for advance planning, the 60 "students" are making excellent progress, Mr. Rieker said. The greatest problem thus far, he explained, is to find enough work to keep the men busy during their four-hour class periods each day. Since practicality is the first rule of instruction in shop work it is necessary that the men be given actual jobs to perform which will correspond with the work he will be doing in factories.

Running Short of Jobs
"Right now we have most of them working on repair jobs, fixing up odd bits of machinery we have around the shop but we're just about run out of that sort of thing and we'll have to find some other jobs that the men can practice on," he said.

The present classes are set up to close about Sept. 1, allowing ample time to get the high school shop in condition by the time summer opens. Mr. Rieker said that as far as he knows no definite plans have been made for similar classes after school opens but that it has been determined that the classes will not conflict with the regular high school shop work.

Mr. Rieker, who is co-ordinator of the Harding High vocational department, is being assisted with the adult program by Floyd E. Sain of the Harding vocational faculty and Charles Williams of the Marion Stenn Shovel Co. In the event a fourth class is started it will be necessary to get one additional instructor.

Experienced Teachers
Mr. Rieker, who has been teaching shop work for 16 years, worked in machine shops at several large industrial concerns before he entered the teaching profession and Mr. Sain was a machine and tool worker for eight years before taking up teaching 15 years ago. Mr. Williams has been employed by the Shovel company 27 years.

The men enrolled in the classes are: Woodrow Bell, Edward Bray, Neil Dickerson, Harry F. Fout, Lawrence Griffith, Dallas Martin, Sherman Seeking, Howard H. Weber, Russell Weston, Don H. Wise, Paul Youngblood, Robert Dean, C. B. Gast, Donald Mason, Carroll Rowley, George Nash, Charles E. PROGRAM PRESENTED AT UNITED GRANGE MEETING

United Grange met Tuesday night at 7:30 (about 8:15) at the Clendon school. The group balloted on a candidate and gave him obligations in the first and second degrees. Mrs. Dora Fields, chairman of the home economics committee, gave a report of a program for the near future. This program will be designed to raise money for the student council fund. Mr. and Mrs. Albert Seckle were in charge of the following program: piano solo, Maxine Reting, Mrs. Norma Seckle, reading, Mrs. Norma Seckle, a play, Marie Leakey, C. C. Smith, Paul Lawrence and Clay Smith and a reading, Mrs. Mae Smith. The program for the next meeting in two weeks will be in charge of the Grand Prairie Grange at the Clendon school.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE
YESTERDAY: To spare heartbroken Julia her family's curiosity, Kay takes her to Fieldstone Inn for lunch. On the way, Julia says that she knows Sandra will make Jeff unhappy.

Room For The Night

"TELL me about it," I said.
"About Sandra's visit during last-class summer, and about how Jeff acted when she first came, and how long it was before you noticed anything."

"It was a long time," she pursed her untroubled desert away and it a cigarette. "At first he seemed to regard her as a duty, and not a very pleasant one. He brought men around to drag her, of course, until she got acquainted, which was pretty soon. She was smooth—she could have had several men. But she kept changing, and sticking to Jeff and me, making it a foursome. I didn't mind—Jeff and I weren't hunting any corners. I thought it would be dumb to start that when we had another year to wait, and I thought he felt the same way about it, though we hadn't discussed it. And it never entered my mind to be jealous when she'd go up to him and kiss him good night—after all, they were raised together, like brother and sister. I guess I'm the world's prize fool."

"Then what happened?"
"Sandra went to New York and got a one-room apartment and started studying dramatic art. I went back to boarding school—my last year, and I had to work pretty hard—I'm not very bright, as you may have noticed. At first she grinned, but she went on without pause."

"I didn't get home as often, and when I did I hardly saw Jeff.
First classmen have week-end privileges, and his always seemed to coincide with my week ends at home. He was always going to New York. To see a show, or the sights. He said he needed a change of scene. And he hardly ever came to see the family while I was away—Dad commented on it, and wondered if Jeff was missing a few ones."

"Sandra asked me to stay with her the week-end of the State Dance game, and I did. I don't really know whether Jeff took her or me to the game. It was all very mixed up, and Jeff wasn't like himself at all. Christmas week he went to New York and stayed with a classmate. He sent me a gold cigarette case with his class crest on it. I had just begun to smoke. He sent Mimi one just like it. They were expensive and lovely, but I cried. I had thought it might be a miniature."

She snubbed out her cigarette, looked again at her ringless hands and put them out of sight in her lap.
"Sandra wrote to me in April that they were engaged. And that was that."

"How did your family take it?"
"How would I know? I pretended to be very busy and stayed at school as much as I dared. Mimi's letters sounded delighted. Dad never writes anything but 'Dear Julia. Endured find cheer.' They'd asked her up for an occasional week-end during the winter, and from then on through the most ghastly June Week I ever spent, she practically lived at West Point."

"Why weren't they married in the chapel?"
"I never quite knew, but I think it was Jeff. He can't be rushed.
Though it may be that Sandra wanted another year in New York. She wouldn't need to be afraid of losing him—when Jeff once gives his word he doesn't break it. As he hasn't. And then Dad had to move heaven and earth to get Jeff in his regiment, which has made it jolly all around."

"She pushed back her chair and rose. I followed her out to the little entrance hall where a pretty, buxom woman had greeted us when we came in. She was still there, but now she was talking to a tall man and a girl who had just arrived."

"I'd like to talk to the proprietor," the man was saying.
"My husband is away for a few days," said the buxom woman. "Is there anything I can do?"

"The hall was dimly lighted. I might not have recognized them if Julia had not stepped and stiffened. Jeff and Sandra. Their backs were toward us."

"Yes," said Jeff. "My wife and I would like a room for the night."
Let Me Be The First

The proprietor's wife said, "Just step into the parlor," and as they turned they saw us.

Sandra was combed; but Jeff's color faded as if the light in the room had turned green. He took a step toward Julia.

She was not looking at him.
"Let me be the first to congratulate you, Sandra," she said in a brilliant voice. I suppose it was near to an insult as she could manage on short notice.

"Thank you," said Sandra, her eyes suddenly hard. "I knew you'd be glad to have the ordeal over with."

did not betray the fact. "And they're already saying there must be some reason for your rushing off and getting married in such a hurry. That—that maybe Sandra did it to protect you!"

Jeff looked as if he still did not understand until Sandra broke into cool, deliberate speech.

"And what if I did? That better than being forced to tell about the time you knocked Ivan down in my apartment? And about your seeing us together on the stage last night? Or, it was very noisy of Julia to pretend she had caught us in a compromising position and was censoring it up—especially when she knew you'd already seen what there was to see."

"And what was that?" asked Jeff bitterly.

Just Ivan trying to persuade me to run away with him, and taking it rather badly when I refused. But you would believe the word—just as you did the time you knocked him down!"

"Never Mind."

"You may recall that I thought he was annoying you. And it may interest you to know that I did not see you last night on the stage."

"What's the use of talking about it?" I did what I thought was best. And I don't really see what business it is of Julia's when we choose to get married."

He continued to look at her for a minute with no expression whatever in his eyes, while Julia turned and walked proudly toward the door. But before she had quite reached it he spoke, her name, and she stopped and waited.

He came over to her then, and putting a hand on each shoulder, turned her around until she looked up and met his eyes.

"Do you think I killed Ivan?"
he demanded.

"I know you didn't," she answered quickly.

"Thanks."

In the instant's pause before he dropped his hands from her shoulders something very much like grief showed in his eyes.

The landlady met us at the door.
"Now about the room—" she began brightly. But Sandra's voice broke in and cut her short.

"Never mind about the room.
We've changed my mind. We won't be needing it after all."

Julia was quiet on the drive back to the post, but not with the first time since I had known her there was a light in her eyes.

I asked to be dropped at the club. She must have sensed my unspoken question about what she planned to do, for she said,
"It's all right now, I can go home.
There are announcements to send and letters to write—Mimi and I will put a good face on this if it can be put. Kay, what is she trying to do to him? But it's all right. You saw him look at me.
She can't hurt him. It's all right."

I wasn't sure what she meant, but I was glad something had comforted her. I watched her drive away. Then I went to my rooms and slept.

A light, almost timid rapping at my door woke me. I had been dreaming that I was trapped in a burning car. The fire was all outside, kept away from me by the glass windows which I dared not open, and I was getting hotter and hotter. Suddenly Gerald was beating at a window, trying to break it in, and I was crying to him to stop, that he would only make things worse.

Adam entered, looking none too sure of his welcome.

"I'm sorry I woke you up," he said. "I came to apologize for my behavior last night."

He was carrying a manila folder, manuscript size. He laid it on my table but he did not take his eyes from my face for a moment.

To be continued.

Marion Legion Junior Team to Open Bid for District Title Friday

Three-Game Series with Columbus
Starts at 3 P. M. at Lincoln Park.

By CHARLES HOBSTETLER
Marion Star Sports Editor

MARION'S American Legion Junior baseball team will launch its bid for the district tournament laurels by playing host to the Columbus representative tomorrow afternoon at Lincoln park in the first of a scheduled three-game series.

The local club goes into district warfare at full strength and boasting a season's record of 10 wins in 12 starts. When the try play ball starts tomorrow at 3 p. m., Coach Thomas L. Hurley will send the pick of more than half a hundred candidates who are on hand for spring tryouts against the visitors from the capital city.

Mr. Hurley manager and Bill Williams, coach, are expected to nominate the team's right-handed hurler, Charles Bowers, for the starting pitcher. Bowers, who did a bit of elbowing for the Harding High school team last season, pitched in previous contests. He lavished a tryout against the Lima Leg on club and last year coupled his efforts with those of Thomas McConnell and Donald Kay to chalk up a combined record of 10 wins and 10 losses against Delaware's squad.

Won in Division

The local club qualified for the district meet by winning two straight games in a three-game series with Delaware. Marion stopped Delaware 20-1 and 14-1, winning the pair on the home and foreign diamonds. The pair of victories are the most of any of the local clubs in the district. Previously they pitched their way through with wins over several other clubs, including the Marion F. O. Eagle and Marion Colored A. C. Both of the defeats came at the hands of Marion R. A. C. an independent junior aggregation.

A number of the players making up this year's junior legion roster are athletes who earlier in the spring carried the brunt of the battle for Coach Bill Williams' Harding High outfit. Many of them moved directly into Pilot Hurley's line up from the school's line and others qualified directly from the series of tryouts staged under his direction. Winner of the district series between Marion and Columbus will qualify for the state finals in which teams from 11 sections will fight it out for the Ohio title. Date and site of the state meet have not been settled. Last year's

Armstrong Stops Jenkins in 6 Rounds

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, July 13.—Henry Armstrong won the fight in six rounds when he stopped Jimmy Jenkins.

The beating the busy little Negro gave lightweight champion Jenkins in a non-title bout under the Polo grounds lights last night was a masterpiece in boxing. Jenkins, a master of his brown body, was circled to lead to the climax between the sixth and seventh rounds when Jenkins slumped to the floor from his stool.

But in his dressing room, Jenkins still was so dazed that it took him some time to realize how his fight had gone. The battered fighter, who had been counted out, was still in the ring when he was called to the ring to fight Jenkins.

But in his dressing room, Jenkins still was so dazed that it took him some time to realize how his fight had gone. The battered fighter, who had been counted out, was still in the ring when he was called to the ring to fight Jenkins.

clearly was sealed from the first round. He left Jenkins in a daze when he landed a right hand to the head.

In all Jenkins was down six times. Once in the fourth round, in the fifth and three more times in the sixth when he was so he could last only spasmodically by instinct. The third time he went down in the sixth he was hit but simply fell from a fight he aimed at Armstrong and missed.
